Village Institution Program

The Village Institution Program of Gandhi Foundation aims to create and nurture alternative and autonomous platforms through which the communities can take responsibility for their own development. The need for this program arose as a result of the limited capacity of panchayats to effectively respond to community needs, fragmentation of communities over a wide variety of issues, and the lack of a developmental outlook at village level. This program intends to create an atmosphere where the positive forces of cooperation, transparency, equity, justice, and responsible autonomy within the community can help in leading towards an overall development of their villages.

Education Program:

The education program of Gandhi Foundation works to ensure education for home as well as young children out-of-schoolchildren and to empower communities to collaborate effectively with the government to ensure quality education through community colleges .

The key objectives are:

- ☐ To ensure access to quality education for rural and poor and needy children in the Age group of 12 to 14

- ☐ To increase community demand for quality education and deepen understanding of the need thereof through community college.
- ☐ To empower youth with agency and confidence to be community leaders. And collaboration with different employment Agencies.

The Gandhi foundation works in areas where children face hurdles in accessing quality education. These areas are dominated by communities, and the condition of schooling is often one of severe neglect with high rates of teacher absenteeism, poor pedagogical methods, inadequate learning materials and infrastructure, and above all, an apathetic atmosphere. In the villages, the economic situation, including the supply and demand inadequacies, reduce the likelihood of a child going to or staying in school. In many places, there is also a high incidence of children migrating either daily or seasonally for work. Hence providing a meaningful education in this context is important not only for the intrinsic value, but also because attendance in school can often prevent the child from migrating at an early age.

Health Program:

Gandhi Foundation health programme, established to work to change peoples' health practices and care seeking behavior through education, awareness and experience with quality services. In addition, we conducted general health camp with MBBS doctor children's staffs and some of the public were benefited the programme explores innovative solutions to local health challenges, as well as works with the government in an attempt to improve the area's public health services.

Gandhi Foundation collaborates with local community health workers, other civil society organizations, the government, and the private health sector to work towards these objectives. The three major components of the health program are maternal health, child health and adolescent health. These specific interventions aim at developing better health-related norms and influence the wider discourse on public and community health.

Women in Development (WID)

Women in Development is our core program. The primary focus of the WID programme is to promote effective leadership among the women living in the our surrounding areas. The programme promotes female leadership in order to achieve gender-equality in Community Based Organizations (CBOs). Increased female participation allows the women to express their views and challenge the exploitation present in their society. Cog wheel trains these women in leadership and communication in order to equip them for their pivotal role in transforming their society.

The Women in Development Programme highlights violence against women and creates gender sensitivity in both men and women.

Members are encouraged and guided into regular savings and credit schemes so that they become able to operate micro-enterprises for their own economic development.
